Customer Reviews

Great for showing the trails. The entire park is on both sides, part on one and the rest on the other, although I would have preferred it all on one side. In that fashion, it would better help me figure out where to stay and what to see. But if you are mainly interested in using it for hiking, then the way it comes is better, as there is more room for details. I found the pdf download map of the on the NPS site extremely poor in comparison. This one is way way better and worth the money.

According to some of the reviews people were being sent the wrong map, but thankfully I have received the correct one and am very happy with it. It is double sided which means that it can be larger without the extra weight or size, it is very extensive and well done, plus it seems to be a somewhat sturdy paper. All in all I would say that ten dollars are well spent on this useful National Geographic Map of Olympic National Park.

This map is awesome. Had all the information we needed, and it really is waterproof which is absolutely essential in the rainy Olympics. Other people on the trail were stopping and asking about where I got it. All around great map.

Similar to the free map you get at a Ranger Station or WIC, but with more details, contour lines, elevations, trail mileage, and more. Good quality paper stock that can stand up to the rigors of backpacking and resist water and humidity.

I just used this map over Memorial Day weekend in ONP. The National Geographic hiking maps are excellent and I highly recommend them. They don't tear and they are waterproof. They provide excellent detail. I have all of their maps for the Pacific Northwest and don't go hiking without them.

I am using this map to embroider the backpacking trip my husband and I took for our honeymoon. It has all the trails we took, it is so detailed we could have used it on our trip 8 day trip! --it is also easy to embroider with a stabilizer in back.

Used this map for recent trip to the ONP and it was essential along with the trails guide book to making sure we were in the right place. If you are going into the back country you need more detailed maps, but it was sufficient for day hikes and getting to trailheads, etc. Durable.

I have dozens of these National Park Maps (traveling photographer). They are very sturdy, water resistant, and detailed. Can't live without them.
